Sustainable House

1. Foundations – Where do we start? What do we need in place to ensure what we build next will be here for a long time? What will need to be in place to create a stable platform from which to grow?
2. Basic structure – what are the basics that should be in place to provide security? What needs to be there to ensure resilience?
3. Self-sustaining – what can we add to create a self-sustaining structure? What is going to give power and resources from within the structure to avoid the need for external support?

Objectives

1. Increase understanding of the (soon to be launched) WHO Sustainability Framework for Action.
2. Reflect on the complimentary 2019 NNN sustainability statement
3. Increase understanding of how the WHO Sustainability Framework for Action will support the shift from process indicators to impact indicators for global NTD progress as guided by the new road map.
4. Support discussion on measurables for sustainability
5. Support transparent community wide discussions and learning across key WHO resources and tools for the new roadmap.

What has brought us here today?

NNN statement

‘Sustainability, for NTD programming, is realized when the intended result is achieved for as long as required. Sustainability is not a binary achievement that either exists or doesn’t; rather, it is a spectrum comprised of multiple context-specific factors.

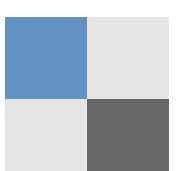

A central theme of sustainability is a national government’s long-term commitment to a goal or result with multi-level, local ownership. Sustainability and ownership are further characterized by the three components of domestic commitment, resource mobilization, and accountability. The three components are closely linked and may not always be completely independent of one another. ‘

Panel discussion: Key stakeholder insights

What motivates donors to share a vision on sustainability and health systems strengthening? How can the NTD community mobilise financial resources for sustainability and health systems strengthening within NTD programmes?

What does success look like, when it comes to sustainable health systems?

What must NGOs be ready to support with when it comes to the research, policy and programmatic changes needed to drive the generation of evidence and adoption of evidenced based decisions that support sustainable systems?

What are some of the challenges to addressing sustainability in NTD programmes?

Capturing your ideas and insights

Our challenge today:

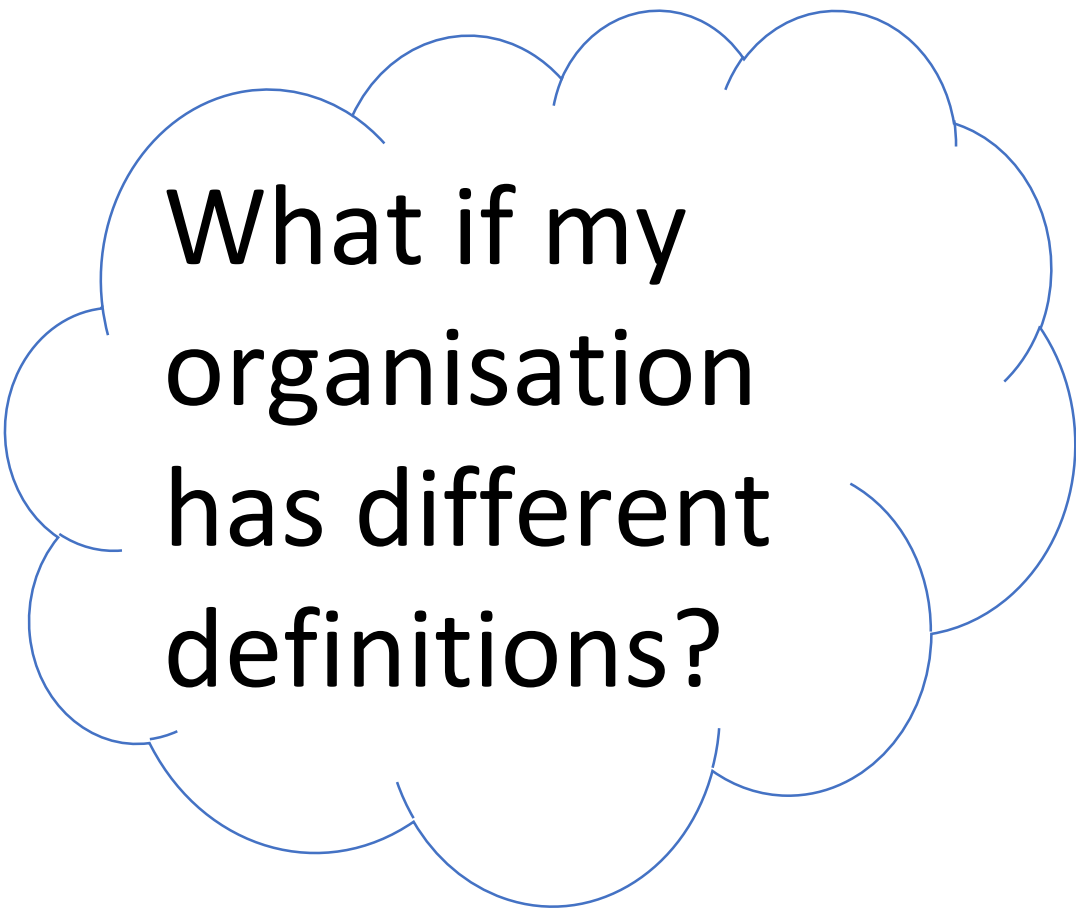

To think about how to measure sustainability.

Do we need to measure at all?

Where do
we start?

What if my organisation has different definitions?
